Chronic Tacos was founded in 2002 by biz partners Daniel Biello and Randy Wyner. In 2005, they opened their second location in Huntington Beach, California.

"As any native knows growing up in Southern California, you get a lot of exposure to taquerias — good and bad," Wyner told LA Taco back in 2014. "The ones with the best food were always the family-owned hole-in-the-wall, tiny shack taquerias. I knew I wanted to capture the SoCal laidback vibe and still provide the authenticity I got from walking into a taqueria that had a couple of generations working together in the kitchen."

NAVIGATE SOCAL SPORTS STADIUMS LIKE A PRO

Published July 3, 2024

By Mike Sonksen

Growing up in the 1980s, I went to countless Dodgers and Angels games with both my grandfather and stepdad. I recently took my 10-year-old son to our first baseball game, and we had — well — a ball. Aside from hitting the beach or having a barbecue, nothing else captures the spirit of summer like taking your children to a professional sporting event. Below, I offer a few tips for visiting some of our local stadiums this summer with your kids. Besides baseball, I include women's basketball and professional soccer because they are in season now, too.

Angel Stadium

Conveniently, there's an Amtrak/Metrolink station about a half-mile away from Angel Stadium in Anaheim. And on game days (regular season runs through the end of September), a free shuttle service runs between the stadium and the station. This is a great option for those who want to avoid expensive parking and gridlock, but be sure to check departure times since baseball games can run long. Originally built in 1966, Angel Stadium is one of the older baseball stadiums in America, but the stadium's amenities and food are top tier. Forget hot dogs — there are Nashville Hot Chicken sandwiches and Chronic tacos. You'll find cocktails on all levels, plus wine and beer on several. If you're looking to save some coins, you can also bring outside food in a clear, plastic bag no larger than a gallon and bottled water or sports drinks no larger than a liter. mlb.com/angels

For Randy Wyner, founder and president of the restaurant franchise Chronic Tacos, there was no choice when it came to getting a college education. His responsibility to support his young son meant he had to get a job instead of going to school. After working up to a managerial position at Jiffy Lube in a few years, Wyner knew he had all the experience and drive he needed to become a business owner. He allowed himself time to develop his entrepreneurial spirit before starting his journey.

“Hands-on learning helped me understand how to manage a business quicker whereas college students learn mostly by memorization techniques and tricks,” Wyner said. “Following this path helped me grasp what to do and what not to do when running a business. Although college may educate you on business elements, you can’t learn how to run a business until you actually become an entrepreneur.”

11. Chronic Tacos

California is no stranger to excellent Mexican cuisine, making it a unique challenge for chains to stand out from the competition. That seems to have been an easy feat for Chronic Tacos, a Los Angeles-based chain that is known both regionally and internationally. In addition to locations as far east as Alabama and Georgia, you will also find Chronic Tacos in Canada and Japan. Chronic Tacos stays close to home as well, with two new locations opening in 2024 in the L.A. area.

15 Popular Fast Food Tacos, Ranked Worst To Best

Chronic Tacos' vegetarian-friendly potato taco is a customer favorite. It consists of a fried corn tortilla filled with mashed potatoes and cheese, topped with lettuce, pico de gallo, and sour cream. If you're confident in your ability to build the perfect taco and you enjoy having your food just the way you like it, Chronic Tacos fits the bill. Fans appreciate the variety of options available and how customizable the menu is. If you prefer tacos with a spicy kick, though, this one may not be for you — critics complain that the salsa lacks bite and the flavors overall are a bit bland.

I Tried 8 Fast-Food Tacos & the Best Was Juicy and Fresh

We cut through the taco glut to find the best-tasting tacos.

Despite being a southern California-founded company, Chronic Tacos wasn't on my radar. Multiple engaged, cheerful employees greeted me when I walked into the shop. They seemed genuinely happy to talk to me, and this wasn't the mood at any other spot on the list. Chronic Tacos is well-known for its customizable, DIY setup with a whole world of toppings, proteins, and styles. One favorite that's always on the menu is the potato taco, so I opted for that one.

The look: This fried corn tortilla is stuffed with mashed potatoes and cheese and then garnished with a choice of toppings. I got cilantro, onions, and lime—the preparation Chronic Tacos calls "street style"—plus the salsa verde, a medium heat.

The taste: This taco blew me away. I wasn't expecting it to be in the top two options, but it was one of the best in terms of flavor, composition, and balance. The tortilla is crunchy from being deep-fried, but still a little chewy—not too crispy or overdone—and the salsa verde was good. The cheese melted great into the potato, and the onions and cilantro added a hint of pungency and herbaceousness, making for a great overall bite. I will return to this restaurant to try more options and other items.
